APOLOGETICS CORNER

Defending our Faith with the Truth

By Father Dennis M. Gordon, FSSP

The Incredible Catholic Mass

THE principal excuse which Christians allege for not hearing Mass is their work. All the time that they are not at work they consider lost time, and more especially the time they spend in assisting at Mass, or some other divine service. In this they are mistaken, and sorely deceived by the devil. Consider if, on his way to work, a man meets a friend who has got a great deal to tell him; he might easily waste half an hour listening to the news. But if any one proposed him to hear a Mass, he would answer that he must be off to his business. So too, if a man had a drink offered him on the way to work, he would surely stop and spend half an hour in the tavern, and not think himself the loser by it; whereas if he had had to go to an early Mass before starting, he would have regretted the loss of so much time. Thus does Satan shamefully strive to blind us, and by all manner of means to deter us from the salutary practice of hearing Mass. But on the contrary, far from being a loss of time for those work for a living, it brings them no small profit, and instead of hindering helps them in their daily toil. "Seek ye therefore first the kingdom of God and His justice, and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33.) Imagine if any one were to render a great and most acceptable service to some man of high rank, noted for his kindness—can we imagine that he would leave that service unrewarded? Certainly not; he would recompense it liberally. Now when we hear Mass devoutly, we render to God an infinite service, infinite honor, infinite satisfaction; we present to Him a gift so costly that all the treasures of heaven cannot outweigh it. Can it be supposed that God will allow this precious gift to be unrewarded, that He will permit us to be the worse off by it? By no means! We know God to be a rewarder of all that is good, and therefore He cannot fail to reward that highest of all services. I will now give an instance of the manner in which God sometimes visibly rewards devout attendance at Mass. In the life of St. John the Almoner we read a story of two shoemakers who lived in Alexandria. One of these men had a wife and a large family to support, yet he went to Mass every day; and God so blessed his industry that although he was very poor at first he soon had a flourishing business. The other was married, but had no children; he worked early and late, never going to Mass except on Sundays, and yet he could scarcely earn a living. Unable to understand how it was that his neighbor got on so much better than he did, he one day went to him and asked how it was that he, who had a wife and a number of children, was so well off, whilst he himself, who worked more hours a day, and had no family, found it more and more difficult to keep the wolf from the door. The other man replied: "I have discovered a hidden treasure, and every day I go to draw some thing from it. That is why I get richer day by day." "My good fellow!" his neighbor rejoined, "do show me where the treasure is!" "Very well," the pious cobbler said, "come to me early tomorrow morning and I will show you the place where lies hid so great a treasure that it is enough to enrich the whole town."

Holy Mass does not hinder our work but helps us in it

Martin Von Cochem

The next morning the poor man made his appearance, delighted at the idea of having the secret disclosed to him. But his neighbor only took him to Mass with him; the following day he did the same, and also the day after. At last the poor man lost his temper, and said: "I know the way to church without your guidance, and I have been to Mass ever since I was a child; if you do not intend to show me the treasure you spoke of, at least do not make a fool of me." The other answered gently: "Do not be angry with me, neighbor; I have not been making a fool of you, for I have really shown you the place where I find my riches. It is none other than the church, and the treasure itself is holy Mass; hence come my gains, this is why we never know what it is to want bread. Do as I do, and doubtless God will do the same for you. Remember the words of our divine Lord: 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His justice, and all these things shall be added unto you.' From the time of my marriage I have sought the kingdom of God by hearing Mass daily; and I can truly say that all these things, that is, the supply of my temporal needs, have been given to me by God. You, on the contrary, have neglected Our Lord's salutary counsel, and have preferred your work to the service of God; consequently your temporal wants have not been supplied, and you have been left in poverty." These words had the desired effect; the other shoemaker saw that he had been negligent in serving God; from that day forth he made it his habit to go to Mass, and found that the divine blessing was no longer withheld from him. The pious cobbler was right in calling holy Mass a treasure; it is indeed a treasure, a mine of gold out of which riches may be dug for time and for eternity. For he who hears Mass in a state of grace will share in the merits of Christ, and these are truly nuggets of celestial gold.

Those who work with their hands, whether in the workshop or in the fields, will experience the truth of the saying: "Without God's aid no progress is made." For let them toil as they may, unless the divine blessing rests upon their labors they will meet with no success; and there is no better means of obtaining an abundant blessing from God than holy Mass. Those who neglect Mass ought not, if they are in want, to wonder what is the cause of their impoverished circumstances, for if we give grudgingly to God He will give grudgingly to us. If merely from indifference and carelessness thou dost withhold from Him the worship that is His due, the satisfaction which thou couldst render to Him by hearing Mass, He will withhold from thee thy daily bread, and His blessing will not be upon thy work. Beware of saying: What use is it to hear Mass? I am none the richer, none the happier, for it; it makes no difference to me whether I have or have not heard Mass. This is the way in which foolish and ungodly persons speak, who have no just idea of what holy Mass really is. Hearing Mass is not only useful for the soul, but for the body as well; the benefit we derive from it is material as well as spiritual. As Fornerus says: "The very food thou dost eat on the day thou hast been to Mass nourishes thee better; thy work succeeds better; any troubles that weigh on thee appear less heavy." Again another pious writer says: "He who begins the day by going to Mass will be attended by better fortune in his work, in his business, in whatever his hand finds to do, or wherever his feet carry him." Let words such as these, setting forth the great utility of the holy sacrifice, incite us to assist at it as frequently as possible.
